RURAL DELIVERY SERVICE.

Mr. Overstreet Secures Order for Reorganization in This County. Through the efforts of Representative Jesse Overstreet, an order has been secured from the Postoffice Department at Washington for the reorganization of the rural to her home in New York. free delivery service in Marion county. The changes made will correct the mistakes made in the original establishment of the complete county service. Some of the routes are now too long, others too short, and there are a few places in the county that are not covered by any of the routes. Mr. Overstreet has been working for some time to secure the improvements desired and his visit to Washington this week resulted in the issuance of the order to Superintendent Rathbone, of the rural delivery division here. An inspector will take up the work at once.

PRETTY SUMMER GOWNS

LIGHT AND FLUFFY ATTIRE FOR WARM WEATHER SERVICE.

so Much Trimming Is the Rule tha Simple Gowns Gain Distinction by Its Absence.

Correspondence of the Indianapolis Journal. NEW YORK, June 10 .- Genuine summer has come at last. Here, in Gotham, that is apt to mean that humidity is making of the future and of the farming folk, and deeply happy, after the usual selfish manner of our kind, to breathe pure air and and many and varied are the demands. I closed my letter of last week with a few hints as to bathing costumes. Before telling you of anything else let me add a few bits of information to that already given. Black or dark blue mohair of good quality remains the chosen material of the really smart folk as it has been for several seasons past. One sees ready-made suits of silk in color and in checks and of white and colored mohair and serge, but the dark inconspicuous suit is in the best rooms were adorned with clusters of yellow | silk clings far too closely when wet to be | the shirtwaist suit is simple. It suits marguerites and ferns. Among the dancers desirable either from the standpoint of morning wear upon the street, afternoons comfort or effect. The day of the heavy at home and like occasions to a nicety, but flannel suit belongs to a forgotten past. It cannot and does not suit all hours of the Mohair is light, sheds the water, does not day. It is not appropriate for the evening. cling unpleasantly. Moreover, good quality It is not a theater gown. Put to such uses, retains its color. Some of the newest suits it is out of place. Elaborately trimmed it stitched flat to within a few inches of the knees and with plaited blouses. Uniformly the necks are slightly open. Puff sleeves are seen and are eminently practical, but handkerchief points appear here as well as in berthas and the like. Latest belts are of stitched linen and match the tie in color. Red is always effective in the water, but other colors are seen. Caps are of many sorts, but nothing serves better than a genuine bandanna or square of homely Turkey red folded to a triangle and tied about the head. The color picturesque, the material does not absorb water, the knotted kerchief is far more becoming and remains more firmly on the head than any cap I have seen. For wear to and from the short long cloaks of some sort are essential. Nothing that I know is better than simple Turkish toweling that can be washed as often as need be and no design better than the circular which can be wrapped about the figure.

FOR SUMMER EVENINGS. For summer evening fetes and dances thin, flimsy gowns of all sorts are worn. The latest show long, unlined, transparent Miss Margaret Shover, Miss Louise Lilly, sleeves with low necks. Berthas are greatgreater number of women and always are and, consequently, allowed of effective and graceful. As charming an example as any yet seen is of white tulle with tiny rings Miss Meltzer of Greencastle and Miss Ada of black and is made with a bertha and cuffs of heavy cream lace in deep points. Another very pretty gown is white silk mull and is shirred elaborately, but otherwise is without trimming on the skirt. The bodice is shirred above the belt and gathered at the neck, where it is finished with circular bertha edged with a deep fall of Clever and economical women are using the lovely fine voiles and crepe de chine and are having them so made as to HOME be wearable both afternoon and evening. The materials are exquisite and durable as well and with two bodices, one high, one low, can be made to give much service. With the favor shown white it is more common to see it so used than any color, for shrewd folk remember it is far less conspicuous and less easily recognized Adjustable yokes, too, are put to much the same practical end and are as attractive as they are simple. The bertha finishes the low evening waist. When needed for daytime service an unlined yoke is added and all is well. After white, nothing is so smart as champagne color and the lovely yellow known as mais. This last is a delight and harmonizes with white and with gray so perfectly as to leave no room for criticism. A notable evening gown ordered by a young matron is of soft gray chiffon over this same shade of yellow, and is trimmed with inset bands of silk lace dyed to match. The skirt is one of the full ones that are graceful and charming in the extreme, and depends upon its fine lines for beauty. At the lower edge are three bands of the lace. At the belt it is laid in overlapping plaits that are held by lace bands applied to give a yoke effect and which fall in soft becoming folds as they approach the floor. The bodice is finely plaited and finished at its upper edge with a fitted trimming of lace, which is extended over the arms at the upper edge of the full sleeves that are cut away to show the shoulders. Shoulder straps of lace keep it in place and a deep draped belt of yellow liberty is worn at the waist. The sleeves are tucked above the elbows, but soft and full below and are held by cuffs of lace. The material is deliciously soft and lovely and the combined colors give an effect more beautiful than it is easy to describe, yet, withal, there is no great cost involved. Shirrings and tucks mean the very height of smartness just now. As they mean time and labor rather than intrinsic cost they can be had by any woman who is deft and has the time and patience to do the work herself. As lovely a dancing gown as any girl of any rank need desire is of dotted net rendered elegant and effective by the gaugings, which give a hip yoke effect, and plaited flounces that are edged with tucks and headed by guipure lace, caught here and there with pale yellow chiffon roses. The bodice is the simple low full one with a deep plaited frill forming the bertha above which is a drapery of yellow chiffon. The sleeves are long, full and transparent, are cut away to reveal the shoulders and shirred snugly at their upper edges. The chiffon drapery passes over the shoulders forming straps and at the waist is a chiffon sash. SHIRRINGS AND TUCKS FAVORED. Garden and party gowns are of flowered organdles, mousselines and the like, as well as of crepe de chine and the filmy chiffon veiling. The organdies are delightwith Mrs. James Grubbs and Miss Olive fully youthful and charming and are made Creasey, will to-morrow return to her on most attractive lines. Again shirrings home in Marion ... . Mrs. George Hogue and and tucks are conspicuous and many most rhyme: a three weeks' visit ... Miss Mary White, desirable effects are obtained. Silk foundaof Franklin, was the guest the first of the tions of the softest, most pliable sorts, are been so beautified and enhanced that many people to whom cost is no consideration A pretty girlish model is made with a wide hem at the edge of the skirt and two sets week with her sister, Mrs. Susan Wishard. of gauged shirrings, one at yoke depth, one between that point and the knees. The waist is shirred to form a yoke and i made with a round open neck finished with lace. The sleeves are shirred to the elbows on continuous lines with the waist then form pointed frills that are lace-edged With this gown is worn a sash of chiffon Crepes and voiles are lovely, but slightly more mature. An exquisite one, worn with but slightly trying shade of lavender that is more pink than blue. The skirt low. The bodice includes a yoke, com is full and gathered into a wide belt of ply full below the elbows and terminate in narrow cuffs that match the belt. With In the twenty-three years that he was an it was worn a hat of white chip profuse-The gowns of simpler use are made, to a nicety. No one thinks of laundering linen made in these ways. It must be cleaned as are pongee and silk. The plaited skirts are beautiful and are quite generally made to clear the ground. They simply cannot be held up with any grace and only with difficulty can be lifted at all, and, wisely, this concession is made, but let no one think that, because even dancing skirts that are plaited are so made, it means any further falling off in the train for occasions of formal dress. On the contrary, these seem to grow longer from one season to the next. I think I have already mentioned the fact that fashionable folk refuse to give up the satisfactory Eton jacket and are ordering it and blouse Etons to the waist only, but with wide sleeves. Some are bell-shaped, some are the new bishop sort with wide turn-over flare cuffs and others again are still newer and include plaited portions that fall free of the cuffs. These last, by the way, though not designed to that end, are admirable for remodeling those of last year, and are not confined to jackets. The sleeve is of the coat sort, split at its outer edge between the width of a narrow cuff and the elbow, and in this split is inserted a plaited piece that is finished and left free at the lower edge. It is smart and becoming in all suiting materials and also is graceful and pretty in lace combined with thin stuff. A most effective muslin is so made and many beautiful crepes and wools show insets of a similar sort.

SHIRTWAIST SUITS. Shirtwaist suits, when left in their native and proper simplicity, are charming, but, alas, are many times spoiled by the tendency to trim all things. In its very nature should be of another sort, and it is a pity the fact should be overlooked. It is the day of overelaboration. We are very nearly trimmed to the point of extinction. These shirtwaist gowns have come as a reaction and a protest. How unfortunate that their mission should be lost through overdoing! Gowns made with blouses cut on simple lines can, however, be trimmed and elaborated to a certain degree with safety. As charming a wash silk as I have seen was worn by a slender girl who boarded my car to-day, and has the merit of being eminently simple while not made with a shirtwaist. The design was a check in black and white. The skirt was quite plain, shirred to give a hip yoke effect. bodice was shirred to form a yoke, full below, and the full sleeves were shirred closely above the elbows. Over each shoulder seam, extending over the sleeves to the end of the shirrings and down the center front, were appliques of heavy Cluny lace, with an additional heavy wheel applied at each point of meeting. The strips were all quite wide, and so gave a shallow yoke effect, while also providing the drooping, broad shoulders so much in vogue. With the gown was worn a loose coat of pongee and a white straw hat, flower trimmed. The whole design was simple in the extreme, but tasteful trimming. Accessories undergo no marked change, except that lace and fine fabric gloves are taking the place of kid, and that the maline bow, to be smart, must be tied about the throat, not pinned on ready made. Ultra smart women make use of a new piece for each tying, and order maline to match each gown, but white still holds a desirable place, and economical folk will manage to tie several times before a single piece must be discarded MAY MANTON.

THE AGE OF A HORSE.

An Old Groom's Advice as to How Not to Be Fooled on It.

Letter in New York Sun. "The groom that came to Chester with Old Abdallah, the sire of Hambletonian, fifty-five years ago," said a veteran Orange county horse-"told me how to tell the age of a horse, and it has run in my head ever since. This is the way it ran," and he repeated the following

To tell the age of any horse, Inspect the lower jaw, of course, The six front teeth the tale will tell, And every doubt and fear dispel. The middle "nippers" you behold "
Before the colt is two weeks old; Before eight weeks two more will come; Eight months, the "corners" cut the gum. The outside grooves will disappear From middle two in just one year: In two years from the second pair: In three the "corners," too, are bare, At two, the middle "nippers" drop;

At three, the second pair can't stop: When four years old, the third pair goes; At five, a full new set he shows. The deep black spots will pass from view At six years from the middle two; The second pair at seven years; At eight, the spot each "corner" clears, From middle "nippers" upper jaw. At nine the black spots will withdraw, The second pair at ten are white:

was disposed of, and the police had testified that this young man was in the crowd, and the judge was about to pronounce the usual sentence when the pastor of the church of which he was a member arose and told the story of the young man. He was passing where the crowd was violating the law, and he had stopped only a moment. He told who he was and what he was. "He ought to have been at work," answered the judge, sternly. "I will give you $10, judge, if you will find anything for him to do or tell me where I can find work for him. He will study law or medicine; those professions are too full already for the population that work at any trade, but he can find no The judge besitated a moment and dis-
